

Dear Children,

Welcome to this special edition of Dayspring, which is dedicated to Thomas Breakwell, the first English person to become a Bahá'í.

Many of you may attend a Sunday school called a Thomas Breakwell, but have you ever wondered who he was? This Dayspring has heaps of information about his life and shows what a wonderful person he was. It is packed with stories, a play and fun activities that you could challenge people to complete at a Nineteen Day Feast. There is even a special competition to enter with a great prize.

The Children's Bahá'í Education Service would like to thank everyone who has helped to produce this Dayspring. Special thanks to Roxy and Roya Ziaie and Cameron Yazdi for their illustrations.

We hope you have fun reading this Dayspring and we can't wait to see your competition entries.

Much love
The Children's Bahá'í Education Service.
